Over a decade ago, I immersed myself in reinterpreting classical subjects through the lens of contemporary expression. These four paintings, completed in 2011, reflect a period of vibrant experimentation in my studio.

They have remained in my personal collection, unseen by many, until now. I am pleased to offer them as part of this special release—an opportunity to acquire works that have been waiting for their moment to find a collector's home.

Each is unique, marked by the spirit of discovery and the energy of that creative chapter.

A Bar at the Folies Bergère

Acrylics on canvas

70 x 89 cm

Available

Painted in early 2011, this work is a vibrant homage to Manet's celebrated scene, reimagined through my distinctive palette of the time. The barmaid's gaze meets the viewer across a shimmering expanse of color and movement, merging realism with expressive abstraction. For me, this painting marked an exploration of how classical subjects can be infused with contemporary energy.

3 O'Clock

Acrylics on canvas

100 x 60 cm

Available

Part of the same creative period, 3 O'Clock captures a figure adrift between reverie and surrender. The bold contrasts and saturated hues were my response to the tension between stillness and inner turbulence. This canvas was an exercise in how light can become a psychological force.

Nonchaloir
Acrylics on canvas
80 x 100 cm
Available

Nonchaloir translates as “indifference,” yet the seated figure radiates quiet introspection.

Here, I worked to balance the luminous warmth of the draped fabric against the cool reserve of her posture. This piece remains one of my personal reflections on solitude and poise.

Promenade on the Beach

Acrylics on canvas

100 x 100 cm

Available

In this vibrant composition, two women move across a shoreline rendered in sweeping color. Painted at the culmination of this series, Promenade on the Beach was an exploration of motion and memory—a celebration of fleeting moments under vast skies.
